

Principles of Vedic Management

- Principles are neither religious nor spiritual, they are based on individual, social, national and universal principles that are always complementary to one-another but never contradicting
- These messages are applicable to everyone in the world and bring about revolutionary internal changes and evolutionary external changes in the society or organization.

- Inter-relation of science and spirituality, ancient and modern, old and new; enquiry into experiential and experimental knowledge; balance of spiritual and physical lives can be seen clearly only in the vedas.
- They advocate taking the good from every where, including all religious and non-religious books.
- Vedas cannot be compared to holy books, books of other cultures and that they focus on the 'Iccha Shakti', 'Jnaana Shakti' and 'Kriya Shakti' in man and methods to enhance the same for personal and societal benefits.
