

Overview

Hindu dharma is based on Sanathana dharma. The Vedas have been an integral part of the Hindu society.

Vedic management principles and practices have a lot to offer. Present day management principles and practices are a subset of the ancient Vedic management principles and practices.

The integration of these two will enhance the productivity of the present day managers and promote the welfare of all stakeholders of the organization or business concerned.

Driving Factors in Topic Selection

- 'Management' originating in the west is related to management of economy or management of institutions but is there something known as 'Vedic Management'?
- Is there a fundamental difference between the management of economy and present day modern management systems?
